This 2008 workshop is designed to provide you with tools to manage the recent and challenging CEQA issues, with focus on global warming and sustainability. Also included this spring is the most recent knowledge with regard to water supply issues, agricultural analysis and mitigation and current thoughts on mitigation and performance standards. This program consists of curriculum developed specifically for professionals in all segments of the environmental industry, including consultants, planners, and staff of state and local government and regulatory agencies. As provided annually in the Spring Workshop is the necessary and extremely valuable summary of the recent 2007 and 2008 (to date) CEQA court decisions and cases, CEQA Guidelines changes including discussion of changes to the Initial Study checklist, and updates of on recent legislation and practical applications. Renowned CEQA practitioners will present up-to-the-minute information in a panel format with time of audience questions and answers.

Topics include discussion of Year 2007 CEQA court decisions, recent CEQA Guidelines changes, updates on recent legislation, and practical applications.

To further supplement the program, registration includes a custom workbook containing the course outline and materials.

This is an excellent opportunity to augment your CEQA skills with the most current information available.
